HOW ANGRY CAN YOU GET ...AGAINST GOD?

BREAKING THE TEN asks that question.

When you lose your family to a car accident, when you've been a good believer, when you face such a random tragic loss...

Can you still believe?

Wilson's character, David, cracks. Now he really wants to test if there IS a God. He decides to break every one of the Ten Commandments.

The first volume showed how he broke five and was already starting to achieve notoriety. On this last volume, he goes on to break all remaining five which this time includes THOU SHALT NOT KILL.

These acts do not go unnoticed by two angels, two voices of conscience, Mr. White and Mr. Black, who are observing him, interacting with him, trying to understand him, steer him.

To no avail. His bitterness is not to be assuaged but by God showing himself and countering him directly.

He is going all the way in a very frightful manner, in an act we have seen all too often... against kids in a school. After all, he has lost his own boy, he cries out to God! What WILL finally get your attention?

Sean Michael Wilson, a Scot living in Japan, has written many comics and graphic novels with various publishers such as Kodansha, as well as edited AX: Alternative Manga for Top Shelf. He is also the author of NBM's cross-cultural shojo (romance) series The Story of Lee of which Publishers Weekly said: "The artwork, particularly the characters, is crisp and expressive, and the story faithfully reproduces a believable slice of life" and which was recommended by Library Media Connection and Teacher Librarian. Japanese Artist Michiru Morikawa has published manga with Kodansha and Shambhala, does poster art for concerts and theaters in Birmingham, UK and done another book with Sean The Faceless Ghost (Shambhala) which received an Eisner nomination.
